

North West Learning Partnership

School Direct

Working across the North West

Have you considered the School Direct route to becoming a primary school teacher?

North West Learning Partnership School Direct is an established School Direct Provider. This means that we are able to offer you quality training and support not just during your Initial Teacher Training, but also in your NQT year and throughout your career. In addition, as one of only 40 Maths Hubs in the country, we are able to provide outstanding training at the forefront of developments in Mathematics education.

Working in partnership with Liverpool John Moores University, we provide our trainees with a strong school-centred postgraduate route into teaching but with the added benefit of studying for a Masters level with Masters credits on our Primary General Teacher Training Programme.

We work closely with our Strategic Partners and Partner schools, which are all outstanding or good, across the North West including St Helens, Wigan, Bolton, Halton, Knowsley, Liverpool and some areas of Manchester. Trainees on our School Direct programme will be allocated a school in our Partnership for one academic year. We provide a personalised and supportive training approach.

The University places great emphasis on high quality, innovative teacher training and recently gained outstanding in their primary provision.
